

My name is Frank Morales. I am a New York City based Episcopal priest and writer, author of Police State America (Arm the Spirit, 2002). The recipient of two Project Censored awards, I have written quite extensively on the subject of police militarization and the increasing use of so called non-lethal weapons by law enforcement, particularly in the area of the suppression of dissent.

I first became aware of Paul Richmond back in 1999 during the Seattle anti-WTO protests. His published work on the repression of dissent and the immoral use of non-lethal weapons against peaceful protesters, provided me with the resources that I was searching for in my own work. We subsequently exchanged numerous emails on this and other subjects, and have appeared at several forums together. Suffice to say, Paul's commitment to justice and truth, and his proven ability to get to the bottom of things, suggests to me that he would make a first rate congressman.

Consequently, I wholeheartedly endorse his efforts to secure such an office and wish him well in his current campaign for the US Congress.

Yours truly,

The Reverend Frank Morales

St. Mark's Church in the Bowery

New York City

My name is Frank Morales. I am a New York City based Episcopal priest and writer, author of Police State America (Arm the Spirit, 2002). The recipient of two Project Censored awards, I have written quite extensively on the subject of police militarization and the increasing use of so called non-lethal weapons by law enforcement, particularly in the area of the suppression of dissent.

I first became aware of Paul Richmond back in 1999 during the Seattle anti-WTO protests. His published work on the repression of dissent and the immoral use of non-lethal weapons against peaceful protesters, provided me with the resources that I was searching for in my own work. We subsequently exchanged numerous emails on this and other subjects, and have appeared at several forums together. Suffice to say, Paul's commitment to justice and truth, and his proven ability to get to the bottom of things, suggests to me that he would make a first rate congressman.

Consequently, I wholeheartedly endorse his efforts to secure such an office and wish him well in his current campaign for the US Congress.

Yours truly,

The Reverend Frank Morales

St. Mark's Church in the Bowery

New York City